

DART's Private Providers Listing

Federal transit law, 49 USC §5323(d), prohibits recipients of Federal financial assistance such as the Delaware Transit Corporation (DTC) from providing charter service. As both public and private providers move to expand service, it is important to ensure that private companies are not placed at a competitive disadvantage in the marketplace. In 1987, the Federal Transit Administration issued charter service rules to prevent public intrusion into private markets.
